KOALA CUDDLES CANCELLED!

An Australian animal sanctuary has pulled the plug on cuddly koala hugs.

The Lone Pine Koala Sanctuary in Brisbane, Queensland, says that, nowadays, visitors are more interested in spending time up close to the famous Aussie animals without hugging them.

General manager Lyndon Stacombe said: "We love that there's a shift among both local and international guests to experience Australian wildlife up close just doing what they do best – eating, sleeping and relaxing in their own space."

Look, but don't touch!

In the past, famous faces have visited Lone Pine to enjoy a selfie with a koala, including Taylor Swift back in 2018. However, animal rights groups say that human hugs are cruel and stress koalas out because they prefer their own space. Hugging koalas is illegal in only two out of Australia's six states.

Suzanne Millthorpe, from World Animal Protection, said: "Koalas are increasingly moving away from outdated, stressful selfie encounters."

The late, great Aussie wildlife warrior, Steve Irwin, once said that close-up encounters can be a good thing, though. "When people touch an animal, the animal touches their heart. And instantly, we've won them over to the conservation [protection] of that species," he said.

Koala numbers are falling in the wild due to bush fires, drought and disease.

LOCHABER

Ospreys on the move

Two young ospreys are being relocated from Scotland to Spain, after fears they're not getting enough food from their father. The Woodland Trust Scotland has been monitoring their progress with a food camera. The father would normally bring four or five fish a day to the nest but, lately, he's been bringing only one a day, or sometimes none. Without enough food, the six-week-old chicks won't survive, so they're being moved from Loch Lomond, near Glasgow, to Loch Fuort with help from the Ray Dennis Wildlife Foundation, which is a leading expert in reintroducing ospreys to Ireland and Spain.
