Research Universities in Africa Cloete, Nico,Bunting, Ian,2018-11-09 From the early 2000s a new discourse emerged in Africa and the international donor community that higher education was important for development in Africa Within this zeitgeist of converging interests a range of agencies agreed that a different collaborative approach to linking higher education to development was necessary This led to the establishment of the Higher Education Research and Advocacy Network in Africa Herana to concentrate on research and advocacy about the possible role and contribution of universities to development in Africa This book is the final publication to emerge from the Herana project The project has also published more than 100 articles chapters reports manuals and datasets and many presentations have been delivered to share insights gained from the work done by Herana Given its prolific dissemination it seems reasonable to ask whether this fourth and final publication will offer the reader anything new This book is certainly different from previous publications in several respects First it is the only book to include an analysis of eight African universities based on the full 15 years of empirical data collected by the project Second previous books and reports were published mid project This book has benefited from an extended gestation period allowing the authors and contributors to reflect on the project without the distractions associated with managing and participating in a large scale project For the first time some of those who have been involved in Herana since its inception have had the opportunity to at least make an attempt to see part of the wood for the trees Different does not necessarily mean new An emphasis on the newness of the data and perspectives presented in this book is important because it shows that it is more than a historical record of a donor funded project Rather each chapter in this book brings to a lesser or greater extent something new to our understanding of universities research and development in Africa Africa

Mizan R Khan, J. Timmons Roberts, Saleemul Huq, Victoria Hoffmeister, 2018-04-09 The Paris Framework for Climate Change Capacity Building pioneers a new era of climate change governance performing the foundational job of clarifying what is meant by the often ad hoc one off uncoordinated ineffective and unsustainable practices of the past decade described as capacity building to address climate change As an alternative this book presents a framework on how to build effective and sustainable capacity systems to meaningfully tackle this long term problem Such a reframing of capacity building itself requires means of implementation The authors combine their decades long experiences in climate negotiations developing climate solutions climate activism and peer reviewed research to chart a realistic roadmap for the implementation of this alternative framework for capacity building As a result this book convincingly makes the case that universities as the highest and sustainable seats of learning and research in the developing countries should be the central hub of capacity building there This will be a valuable resource for students researchers and policy makers in the areas of climate change and
