

Enzymes and Cellular Regulation

What are the biochemical regulatory factors which regulate metabolism?

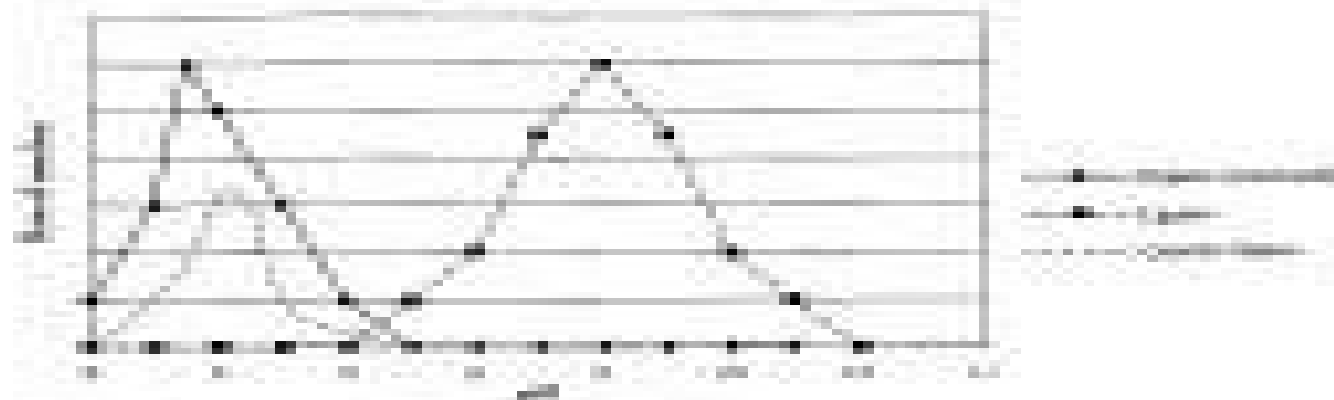

What?

Digestive enzymes are protein based biological catalysts that play a significant role in life. They help various substances react with each other, such as converting the food into glucose. They are also different from other biological catalysts as they work with water. These enzymes are made up of amino acid sequences, called as their sequences. These sequences lead to a 3D structure of protein molecules. In this section, we will look at the general structure for two different enzymes. The digestive enzyme, lysozyme, is made by the human and amylase is made by the small intestine. While lysozyme breakdown proteins in the stomach.
