Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported hearing impairment in a community sample of older adults. Methods: Data were obtained from the National Health and Medical Research Council's Australian Hearing Study, a population-based study of hearing impairment in older adults. Results: The prevalence of self-reported hearing impairment was 10.5% in the community sample. Conclusion: The prevalence of self-reported hearing impairment in the community sample was higher than the prevalence of hearing impairment as determined by audiometric testing.
