

Foundations

FEMA

Purpose

To provide guidance on avoiding the ignition of foundations by windborne embers and convective and radiant heat in wildfire zones. Guidance pertains to both new and existing buildings.

Foundation Designs

Foundations can be open or closed. Homes normally have only one type of foundation, but some have both.

Closed Foundation

In a closed foundation, the foundation wall extends from the footing to the first floor around the perimeter of the building. The foundation wall is typically a bearing wall. The below-grade portion is typically constructed of concrete or masonry, but preservative-treated wood can also be used. The above-grade portion may also be constructed of concrete or masonry, or it may be a stud wall (commonly referred to as a "cripple wall"; see Figure 1). The foundation wall encloses a basement, a crawlspace, or the soil below a slab-on-grade.

Open Foundation

In an open foundation, the building is supported by piles or piers, and the bottom of the first-floor framing is several feet above-grade (see Figure 2). Piles and piers are constructed of concrete, masonry, timber, or steel. Some of the area below the first floor may be enclosed with walls for an elevator or to create a small storage area.¹ Wood lattice is also often placed between piles/piers to provide a privacy screen (for example, around cars parked under the building).
