The Bone Biopsy Jennifer Jowsey, 2012-12-06 During the last ten years, the diagnostic approach to disorders of bone and mineral metabolism has benefited considerably from the development of radioimmunoassay and competitive protein binding techniques for measurements of circulating parathyroid hormone, calcitonin and biologically active vitamin D metabolites. Accumulated experiences with radiogrametric and densitometric methods of quantitating appendicular bone mass now facilitate the detection of changes in bone mineral content heretofore unrecognized by routine roentgenographic vertebral analysis. During this same decade, the diagnosis of metabolic bone disease and the skeletal response to remedial therapeutic maneuvers have also been facilitated by the routine application of the bone biopsy. Improvements in tinctorial techniques, standardization in methodology, essential for adequate preparation of thin undecalcified specimens and the incorporation of tetracycline bone formation or mineralization markers should now herald the routine use of this diagnostic procedure. Moreover, the compilation and ready availability of reference morphometric data spanning the prepubescent years characterized by skeletal growth and remodeling and the later senescent period during which bone loss normally proceeds in an unrelenting fashion allow adequate differentiation between normal age sex related changes in skeletal turnover attendant on skeletal maturation and aging and acquired or inherited derangements in bone metabolism.
