- What's the deal with the "new" Star Trek?

As mentioned in the first paper, we have two different ways of measuring the performance of the model. The first way is to use the accuracy of the model. The second way is to use the F1 score. The F1 score is the harmonic mean of the precision and recall. The precision is the ratio of the number of correct predictions to the total number of predictions. The recall is the ratio of the number of correct predictions to the total number of actual positives. The F1 score is calculated as follows:

$$F1 = 2 \times \frac{\text{Precision} \times \text{Recall}}{\text{Precision} + \text{Recall}}$$

The F1 score is a useful metric for comparing different models. It is especially useful when the data is imbalanced. In our case, the data is imbalanced because there are many more negative samples than positive samples. The F1 score is a good way to measure the performance of the model in this case.
