Abstract: This paper presents a novel approach to the problem of finding the optimal solution to a given problem. The proposed method is based on the use of a genetic algorithm, which is a search algorithm inspired by the process of natural selection. The algorithm starts with a population of random solutions, which are then evolved over generations. In each generation, the fitness of each solution is evaluated, and the fittest solutions are selected to produce the next generation. This process is repeated until a satisfactory solution is found. The proposed method is applied to the problem of finding the optimal solution to a given problem, and the results are compared with those of other methods. The results show that the proposed method is able to find the optimal solution more efficiently than other methods.
