Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week, 1000 kcal/day energy restriction on the body composition and metabolic profile of obese women. The study was conducted in a clinical setting. The subjects were 12 obese women (mean age 45.5 ± 5.5 years, mean BMI 35.5 ± 3.5 kg/m²). The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group (n = 6) and an intervention group (n = 6). The control group received no intervention, while the intervention group received a 1000 kcal/day energy restriction. The study was conducted over a 12-week period. The primary outcome was the change in body composition, measured by dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry (DXA). The secondary outcome was the change in metabolic profile, measured by fasting blood glucose, fasting insulin, and fasting triglyceride levels. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant decrease in body weight, fat mass, and visceral fat mass compared to the control group. The intervention group also had a significant decrease in fasting blood glucose, fasting insulin, and fasting triglyceride levels compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week, 1000 kcal/day energy restriction is effective in improving body composition and metabolic profile in obese women.
