

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. Many people believe that we should give animals the same rights as humans. Others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings such as humans are not usually the same as we are. For example, it has been argued that some animals – birds and dolphins – are so intelligent that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against giving rights for animals, however. That they do not have the ability of human beings, not spoken but written, for their own thinking, and that their form of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks, however, that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they are not treated as a commodity, as with the case of a wild animal. They are the natural part of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting and opposing animal rights. However, it seems that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they are not treated as a commodity, as with the case of a wild animal. They are the natural part of the world.
