Accommodation for assessments. Cannot be embedded in state tests	Why? Some students start the day really strong but then fade during the day. If so, test them in the morning! Some students don't wake up fully until after lunch, so test them then! Some students have variable blood sugar levels and so you don't want to test them after a meal. Basically, if there is a time where students are likely to do better on a test, add this in and specify when! When? Assessments How? Figure out when a student is at their strongest and write that into the IEP! Why? Some students get overwhelmed or fatigued with long testing sessions. If so, they might benefit from being tested individually or in a small group and having the chunks broken up!	Due to [medical, attentional, socioemotional] needs, _____ benefits from flexibility in scheduling, including being able to take state assessments at times of day when he/she is strongest such as [the morning, in the afternoon, etc.]
