How to Make a Kite

People have flown kites for at least two thousand years. Kites are fun to fly, but did you know there are also practical reasons to fly them? It is said that, in 1750, Benjamin Franklin flew a kite in a thunderstorm to verify that lightning was electricity. The Wright brothers tested many of their aviation theories by flying early airplane designs as kites. This allowed them to try out different wing shapes and controls from the ground before their famous first flight in 1903. They chose Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, to test their plane designs because it was always so windy there.
