Computational Propaganda Samuel C. Woolley, Philip N. Howard, 2019 Social media platforms do not just circulate political ideas they support manipulative disinformation campaigns While some of these disinformation campaigns are carried out directly by individuals most are waged by software commonly known as bots programmed to perform simple repetitive robotic tasks Some social media bots collect and distribute legitimate information while others communicate with and harass people manipulate trending algorithms and inundate systems with spam Campaigns made up of bots fake accounts and trolls can be coordinated by one person or a small group of people to give the illusion of large scale consensus Some political regimes use political bots to silence opponents and to push official state messaging to sway the vote during elections and to defame critics human rights defenders civil society groups and journalists This book argues that such automation and platform manipulation amounts to a new political communications mechanism that Samuel Woolley and Philip N Howard call computational propaganda This differs from older styles of propaganda in that it uses algorithms automation and human curation to purposefully distribute misleading information over social media networks while it actively learns from and mimicks real people so as to manipulate public opinion across a diverse range of platforms and device networks This book includes cases of computational propaganda from nine countries both democratic and authoritarian and four continents North and South America Europe and Asia covering propaganda efforts over a wide array of social media platforms and usage in different types of political processes elections referenda and during political crises

One America? Nathan Angelo, 2019-05-02 Despite major advancements in civil rights in the United States since the 1960s racial inequality continues to persist in American society While it may appear that presidents do not address the topic of race it lurks in the background of presidential political speech across a range of issues including welfare crime and American identity Using a thorough approach that places textual analysis in a historical context One America asks what presidents say about race how often they say it and to whom they say it Nathan Angelo demonstrates how presidents attempt to use rhetoric to compose a message that will resonate with the many groups that comprise the modern party system but ultimately those alliances cause presidents to direct most of their speeches about race to an archetypical white Middle American swing voter thereby restricting the issues and solutions that they discuss While the American demographic profile is changing rhetoric that links American identity with racially coded concepts and appeals to white voters racial resentments has become ubiquitous Angelo warns us about the possible repercussions of such tactics noting that while they may allow presidents to craft winning coalitions their use continues to legitimate a system that ignores racial inequality
