TCSPC originates from the measurement of excited nuclear states and has been used since the late 60s. 775 1250 For many years TCSPC was used primarily to record fluorescence decay curves of organic dyes in solution. Due to the low intensity and low repetition rate of the light sources and the limited speed of the electronics of the 70s and 80s the acquisition times were extremely long. More important classic TCSPC was intrinsically one dimensional i.e. limited to the recording of the waveform of a periodic light signal. Light sources ceased to be a limitation when the first mode locked Argon lasers and synchronously pumped dye lasers were introduced. For the recording electronics the situation changed with the introduction of the SPC 300 modules of Becker. Multi module TCSPC systems followed in 1999. Since then the Becker Hickl TCSPC systems became bigger, faster and more flexible. Recent TCSPC modules like the SPC 150NX or the SPC 180 can be configured for sequential recording, imaging or time tag recording by a simple software command. Multi module systems like the SPC 134EM and SPC 154 can be used for scanning at unprecedented count rates and acquisition speeds. Nevertheless TCSPC still has the reputation to be an extremely sluggish technique unable to record any fast changes in the fluorescence or scattering behaviour of a sample. The multidimensional features of modern TCSPC are not commonly understood. Thus many users do not make efficient use of their SPC modules. However if appropriately used multidimensional TCSPC techniques not only deliver superior results but also solve highly sophisticated measurement problems. This handbook is an attempt to help existing and potential users understand and make use of the advanced features.
