Tourist Customer Service Satisfaction Francis Noe, Muzaffer Uysal, Vincent Magnini, 2010-10-04 Customer satisfaction and loyalty in the tourism sector is highly dependent upon the behaviours of front line service providers Service is about people how they relate to one another fulfill each other's needs and ultimately care for each other Yet surprisingly there are few or any books which focus on the detailed specifics of the social exchange and interaction between the service provider and customer Tourist Customer Service Satisfaction fully explores this relationship by defining the specific kind of verbal and non verbal messages needed for successful exchanges outlining how the service provider ought to behave cope in a situation as well as detailing positive approaches that enhance a service provider's role performance The book uses encounter theory to examine the customer provider relationship as well as drawing on current research and theories from hospitality tourism management psychology bodies of literature In doing so the book offers important insight into how employee centric competitive advantage in this sector can be achieved in various markets This book is unique in its approach by focusing on the specifics of the social exchange and interaction between the service provider and customer It therefore offers a novel synthesis of knowledge on service satisfaction in the tourism sector which will serve as valuable pedagogical and research reference for students and academics interested in hospitality and tourism

Federal Register, 2013-08 The Virtual Public Servant Stephen Jeffares, 2020-11-30 With recent advances and investment in artificial intelligence are we on the verge of introducing virtual public servants Governments around the world are rapidly deploying robots and virtual agents in healthcare education local government social care and criminal justice These advances not only promise unprecedented levels of control and convenience at a reduced cost but also claim to connect to empathise and to build trust This book documents how after decades of designing out costly face to face transactions investment in call centres and incentivising citizens to self service the tech industry is promising to re humanise our frontline public services It breaks out of disciplinary silos and moves us on from the polarised hype vs fear discussion on the future of work It does so through in depth Q methodology interviews with a wide range of frontline public servants from doctors to librarians from social workers to school receptionists and from police officers to call handlers The first of its kind this book should be of interest across the social sciences and to anyone concerned with how recent measures to digitise and automate our services are paving the way for the development of full blown AI in frontline work

Information Systems in Child, Youth, and Family Agencies Jerome Beker, Anthony J Grasso Dsw, Irwin Epstein, Boysville Of Michigan, 1993-10-27 Here is a detailed look at the design development and successful implementation of a utilization focused computerized information system in an agency serving children youths and families

This important book describes Boysville of Michigan's effort to create a model of information utilization designed specifically for social service settings and details their unique attempt to integrate information technology and social work practice at every organizational level. Information Systems in Child Youth and Family Agencies covers Boysville's five year endeavor to design, implement and evaluate BOMIS (Boysville Management Information System), their computerized management information program, evaluation and clinical decision making system. The book shows how practice based research can contribute to broader practice relevant knowledge for the field in general as well as for the sponsoring agency. It contains collaborative contributions by practitioners, managers, administrators and researchers who were directly involved in the development and utilization of the information system. Many of the problems Boysville solved while implementing BOMIS are also likely to face information specialists and social work administrators in other agencies who are trying to integrate information technology with the practice needs of direct service workers. This in depth case study helps them discover some of the ins and outs of setting up their own information system. Information Systems in Child Youth and Family Agencies is divided into three sections. The first describes the underlying theoretical assumptions of the Boysville system and the organizational structures and processes that translate these assumptions into practice. This section is written largely by Boysville's research staff. The next set of chapters, written primarily by Boysville's practice and administrative staff, illustrates the programmatic uses of information provided by BOMIS. The last section illustrates how BOMIS data can serve internal organizational purposes as well as reflect on broader issues in the field and is written by members of Boysville's National Research Advisory Committee. Unique in its collaborative authorship by practitioners and researchers and its dual focus for agency decision making and for knowledge development, this book is especially helpful for managers and administrators interested in promoting computer based practice research in their agencies, for research consultants and for applied researchers in the human services.
