CORN CHRONICLES

THE JOURNEY FROM PLATE TO POOP

How the Digestive System Works

The digestive system is a complex network of organs that work together to break down food into nutrients that the body can use. It starts in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The food then travels down the esophagus to the stomach, where it is broken down into smaller pieces. From the stomach, the food moves into the small intestine, where most of the nutrients are absorbed. The remaining waste travels through the large intestine and is eventually eliminated from the body through the rectum and anus.

Breaking Down is Hard to Do

While the digestive system is designed to break down food, it can sometimes have trouble. For example, if you eat too much food or eat food that is difficult to digest, you may experience indigestion or heartburn. These symptoms are caused by the stomach producing too much acid or the food not moving through the digestive system properly. To avoid these problems, it's important to eat a healthy diet and practice good eating habits, such as chewing your food thoroughly and not eating too quickly.

Let's Process This

Understanding how the digestive system works can help you make better choices about what you eat and how you eat. For example, knowing that the stomach produces acid can help you understand why you should avoid eating too much spicy or acidic food. Similarly, knowing that the large intestine is responsible for eliminating waste can help you understand why it's important to drink plenty of water and eat fiber-rich foods to keep your digestive system healthy.
