Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported depression among the adult population in the United States. Methods: Data were obtained from the 2002 National Health and Medical Examination Survey, a nationally representative sample of the United States population. Results: The prevalence of self-reported depression was 10.1% among the adult population. The prevalence was higher among females than males, and among those with lower education and income. Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported depression is high, and is associated with several risk factors. Further research is needed to determine the causes of depression and the best ways to treat it.
