News ,1979-10 I Was an Erk in the Royal Air Force Roy Taylor,2012-03 Back in the late 1930s it was a common practice for the Government of England to call up young men into the Armed Services After the war with Germany ended 1945 this practice continued so that England would have ready trained Armed Forces in case war with any other country should be declared North Korea was a good example I decided to beat the call up and instead volunteer so that I could be in the service that I desired For the average service person the Royal Air Force was a force that did not put the person in an area where gunfire ruled I did not want to be involved in the exchange of gunfire with anyone Electronics was my liking and although many over the air two way discussions did take place it was always in firm sensible good language That was the way that I was brought up and that was the way that I stayed The book is about my life and the way that I reacted when mixed with other youth from around England I have long had the belief that I was chosen and helped to become what I am The book is about my experiences and how my helper kept me on track even when serving in a foreign country Radio-electronics

1873 Radio, Public Life and Citizen Deliberation in South Africa Sarah Chiumbu,Gilbert Motsaathebe,2021-05-24 This book critically analyses the important role of radio in public life in post apartheid South Africa As the most widespread and popular form of communication in the country radio occupies an essential space in the deliberation and the construction of public opinion in South Africa From just a few state controlled stations during the apartheid era there are now more than 100 radio stations reaching vast swathes of the population and providing an important space for citizens to air their views and take part in significant socio economic and political issues of the country The various contributors to this book demonstrate that whilst print and television media often serve elite interests and audiences the low cost and flexibility of radio has helped it to create a common space for national dialogue and deliberation The book also investigates the ways in which digital technologies have enhanced the consumption of radio and produced a sense of imagined community for citizens including those in marginalised communities and rural areas This book will be of interest to researchers with an interest in media politics and culture in South Africa specifically as well as those with an interest in broadcast media more generally
