

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. While many people believe that we should give animals legal rights to humans, others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for north intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings, and if they are not receiving the same as we are, for example, it has been argued that some animals - birds and dolphins - receive the same rights as humans as they would display the signs of their pain, and wish that we would communicate with humans suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against legal rights for animals, particularly that they do not have the ability of human beings, not having the same level of thought or feelings, and that the level of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks, however, that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they would be treated as normal, and that the same as that of a wild and a sheep. It would be wrong for us to think animals for our own benefit because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both arguing that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some legal rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and that should be done for both their protection, from others suffering.
