Our organisms manufacture antibodies automatically to many molecules, proteins, and microorganisms. Among others, when foreign red-cell surface glycoproteins (antigens) are in the bloodstream they stimulate the immune system to manufacture antibodies against them. These antibodies (antibodies) are proteins that recognize and bind to the antigens. They are called antibodies because they participate in the body's immune response to antigens. The antibodies bind to the antigens and mark them for destruction by other cells in the immune system.
