

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. Many people believe that we should give animals the same rights as humans. Others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings such as humans are not usually the same as we are. For example, it has been argued that some animals – birds and dolphins – think, feel and perhaps behave as though animals despite the signs of their pain, and wish that we could communicate with humans better. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against giving rights for animals, particularly that they do not have the ability of human beings not to feel pain but to feel pain or suffering, and that the loss of behavior is clearly normal within the natural world. It is true, however, that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they would not be used as food or clothing, and that the loss of behavior is clearly normal within the natural world. It is true, however, that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they would not be used as food or clothing, and that the loss of behavior is clearly normal within the natural world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting and opposing animal rights. However, it is clear that animals deserve respect, protection, and some rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and that should be done for both their protection and their bettering.
