implement Joseph Stalin's vision of a total transformation of nature. Intended to increase agricultural yields dramatically, this utopian impulse quickly spread to the newly communist states of Eastern Europe, captivating political elites and war-fatigued publics alike. By the time of Stalin's death, however, these attempts at transformation, which relied upon ideologically corrupted and pseudoscientific theories, had proven a spectacular failure. This richly detailed volume follows the history of such projects in three communist states: Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia, and explores their varied but largely disastrous consequences.
