Paragraph 18

Paragraph 18 For your knowledge, the ratifiers distributed the final version with complete power until we do know if the ratifiers had a constitutional guard against tyranny. The ratifiers intended to create a system of checks and balances.
Paragraph 19 In 1787, the delegates from the Philadelphia Convention met to discuss the new constitution. The delegates decided to go forward with creating the constitution after a long period of discussion.
Paragraph 20 The delegates passed a series of amendments to the constitution to ensure that the government would be a balanced, representative government.

Paragraph 22

Paragraph 22 The first guard against tyranny, checks and balances, divides power into three branches: legislative, executive, and judicial. Each branch has its own powers and responsibilities. The legislative branch makes laws, the executive branch enforces laws, and the judicial branch interprets laws. This system of checks and balances ensures that no one branch becomes too powerful.
Paragraph 23 The second guard against tyranny is federalism. This is the division of power between the national government and the state governments. The national government has certain powers, while the state governments have other powers. This system of federalism ensures that the national government does not become too powerful.
Paragraph 24 The third guard against tyranny is the separation of powers. This is the division of power between the three branches of government. The legislative branch makes laws, the executive branch enforces laws, and the judicial branch interprets laws. This system of separation of powers ensures that no one branch becomes too powerful.

Paragraph 25

Paragraph 25 The fourth guard against tyranny is the Bill of Rights. This is a list of 10 amendments that protect individual liberties. The Bill of Rights ensures that the government cannot take away certain rights of citizens. This system of the Bill of Rights ensures that the government cannot become too powerful.
Paragraph 26 The fifth guard against tyranny is the amendment process. This is the process by which the Constitution can be changed. The amendment process ensures that the Constitution remains relevant and effective.
