

Your Home Theater Guide

So you're planning to convert your living room into your very own home theater. Well, it seems an easy project, but it may not turn out as you expect it to be. This guide might help make it easier for you to design and furnish your home theater room.

Keep in Mind the Room Dimensions

Before you get too excited, it is an essential step for you to measure first the entire space you have for your theater room including the distances where you plan to place your television set and your home theater seats.

Important Considerations When Shopping for Your Home Theater Furniture

Width of Your Viewing Screen - The ideal viewing distance is between 1.5 to 2 times the measurement of the width of the viewing screen. From this, you'll be able to determine where to place your first row of theater seats.

Do you need a second row of seats? If you plan to place second row of theater seats, you may need to raise the platform by at least seven inches. Majority of theater loungers require 72 inch depth stand for the second row of seats.

The Recliners

Most theater seating has wall saver designs. Recliners may require around 4 inches clearance space from the wall. Always check the product specs to determine how much space you will need. If the recliner has a footrest, you might need a wider space in the front to accommodate the footrest.

4 Important Measurements

- The depth of the theater seat in its full recline position
- The depth of the theater seat in its upright position
- The distance from the front of the home theater seat to front of its footrest.
- The distance from the back of the headrest to the foot of the theater seating

Fixed Home Theater Seats

Fixed home theater seats are similar to actual movie theater seats. They usually have a rocking mechanism. Majority of movie theater seating do not have reclines - they actually rock. Unlike recliners, this type of theater seats fits well in smaller spaces. However, they may not provide the same comfort as recliners. It is perfect in fitting more people in a smaller space.
