

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

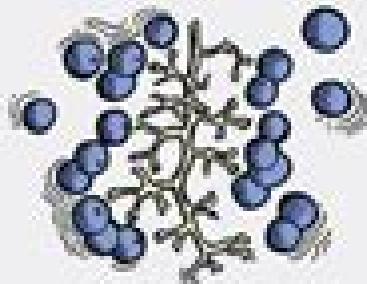

WINE FOLLY

The only guide to the wine-making process that is both fun and informative

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) period is the best time to pick the grapes. Harvesting is done by hand or machine. Grapes are picked when they are ripe and sweet. The grapes are then taken to the winery to be processed.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and destemmed. Some wineries ferment whole clusters to add flavor. The result is a mixture of whole grapes and juice. Most wineries, however, crush the grapes to remove the seeds and stems, leaving them to be used as pomace.

Clarification

Clarifying or "fining" agents such as egg whites or vegetable protein are added to the juice to remove any remaining solids. These agents bind to the solids and are then filtered out. Some wineries use ultrafiltration to clarify the juice.

Press

After the fermentation process, the juice is pressed. The juice is then filtered and bottled. The pomace is left to dry and can be used for other purposes.

Fermentation

Grapes are crushed and the juice is fermented. The juice is then filtered and bottled. The pomace is left to dry and can be used for other purposes.

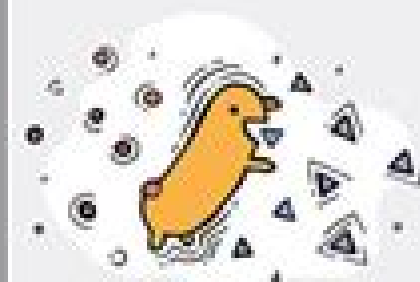

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the juice to start the fermentation process. The yeast converts the sugar in the juice into alcohol. The fermentation process can take anywhere from a few days to several weeks.

Bottling

Bottling is done with care to prevent oxidation. The bottles are sealed and stored in a cool, dark place. The wine is then aged before being served.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a process in which malic acid is converted to lactic acid. This process gives the wine a smoother, creamier texture. It is often used to soften the acidity of the wine.

Aging

Red wine is aged in barrels or bottles for several months to years. The aging process allows the wine to develop a more complex flavor and a smoother texture.

Blending

The winemaker blends the grapes to create a specific flavor profile. The blending process can take anywhere from a few days to several weeks.

Bottle aging

Some wines continue to age in the bottle. The aging process allows the wine to develop a more complex flavor and a smoother texture.
