

THE SKELETON

The skeleton is the framework of the body, providing support and protection for the internal organs. It is composed of bones and cartilage.

THE MUSCLES

Muscles are responsible for movement and maintaining posture. They are composed of muscle fibers and connective tissue.

THE JOINTS

Joints are the points where two or more bones meet. They allow for movement and flexibility. There are three main types of joints: ball-and-socket, hinge, and pivot.

THE LIGAMENTS

Ligaments are bands of connective tissue that connect bones to other bones, providing stability and support.

The musculoskeletal system is a complex system that allows us to move and maintain our posture. It is composed of the skeleton, muscles, joints, and ligaments. The skeleton provides the framework, while the muscles provide the power for movement. Joints and ligaments allow for flexibility and stability. The system is constantly working to maintain balance and support the body.

The musculoskeletal system is also responsible for the production of red blood cells. The bone marrow, which is located inside the bones, is the site of red blood cell production. Red blood cells are responsible for carrying oxygen throughout the body. The system is also involved in the regulation of calcium levels in the body.
