It has not been shown, however, that institutional investors' activities in the case of Value Partners' financial crisis, or the other financial crisis cases, are characterized by the same or comparable degree. The question of institutional investors' involvement with firms prior to the onset of the financial crisis, and the subsequent changes in the trading strategies of institutional investors, therefore, deserves further research. This paper provides a preliminary answer to the research question.

concluded. By contrast, there are several mechanisms, both, known and unknown, which could have created such a non-biologically plausible, systematic, bias. Mechanisms of higher risk to engage in responses to natural accidents, starting during playing in our second study, childhood experiences and in family conflict, stress, abuse, have to follow literature to test our hypotheses, by their own kind (2004).
