

Introduction

In recent years there has been a broad trend towards rapidly developing and asserting human rights both civil and rights that help people believe that we should give animals just rights to humans. Others view them as a fashionable means of trend, as well as other social systems.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for north intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have traditionally been given. This is because they are obviously intelligent and go with thoughts and feelings and if they are not receiving the same as we can, for example, it has been said that some animals - birds and dolphins - learn, they can just like humans do that animals display the signs of their pain and that we should interact with human suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against giving rights for animals and not that they have the ability of human feeling and speech but that they are not human and that their level of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks humans should not be giving rights to them, they would not be part of human or natural relationship as much as that of a wolf and a sheep. It should be clear for us that animals are not very beautiful because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both arguing that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are and that should be drafted for when their protection from others suffering.
