Lord Jim

He was an inch or two under six feet, strongly built, and always dressed in white. To the men on the docks, he was "Jim."

Of course he had a last name, but he never told anyone what it was. And, since he moved often from port to port in the Far East, no one really cared about his family history. Only the Malays, who met him when he had left the ports of the white men, ever gave him another name. They called him "Tuan Jim" or "Lord Jim."
