CORN CHRONICLES

THE JOURNEY FROM PLATE TO POOP

How the Digestive System Works

The digestive system is a complex network of organs that work together to break down food into nutrients that the body can use. It starts in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The food then travels down the esophagus to the stomach, where it is broken down into smaller pieces. From the stomach, the food moves into the small intestine, where it is further broken down and nutrients are absorbed. The remaining waste then moves into the large intestine, where it is processed and eventually eliminated from the body.

Breaking Down is Hard to Do

While the digestive system is designed to break down food, it can sometimes have trouble. For example, if you eat too much food or eat food that is hard to digest, you may experience indigestion or heartburn. This is because the stomach is having trouble breaking down the food, and the acid in the stomach is irritating the lining of the esophagus. Other common digestive problems include constipation, diarrhea, and irritable bowel syndrome (IBS).

Let's Process This

Understanding how the digestive system works can help you make better choices about what you eat and how you eat. For example, eating a balanced diet with plenty of fruits, vegetables, and whole grains can help keep your digestive system healthy. Drinking plenty of water is also important for keeping your digestive system moving. Finally, eating slowly and chewing your food thoroughly can help your stomach do its job more easily.
