Abstract

1. Measure the distance between the top of the existing finished floor and the ceiling. Record the distance, making sure to make the measurement at several locations to determine the highest. (The original ceiling and plastering/boarding is the only safe way to make your ceiling system the proper height.)
2. Measure the floor joists (or trusses) at the location you have chosen on top of the ceiling. Do not measure any studs or struts that are located on the bottom of the ceiling.
3. Make the same measurement on the bottom of your ceiling joists to the bottom of the space between the floor joists or trusses.
4. Add the two values to get the actual space you have between the floor joists or trusses and the ceiling. (If the ceiling is made of plaster, you may need to add 1/2" for the plaster.)
5. Compare this value to the ceiling height of the ceiling system you are installing. The difference between the two values is the amount of space you need to add to the ceiling system.

Abstract

This system is designed to capture the relevant 100–2000 Å UV range and, in one channel, to capture the entire UV sky (all polar angles). The multi-channel design of the 'wide' field-of-view instrument is also operated. The wide channel is composed of 60 wide field-of-view channels. The full channel set can be split and recombined by a dichroic mirror. When the system is used in the wide-field mode, the light is filtered by a dichroic mirror to produce the full ultraviolet spectrum. To facilitate the use of this instrument during the solar maximum, a 300 nm cut-off dichroic mirror is used.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be a safe and effective means of increasing physical activity in sedentary women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a low-impact aerobic workout, and a low-intensity strength training routine. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on the physical fitness of the women. There was a significant increase in heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index (BMI) over the 12-week period. The program was well-tolerated by the women, and they reported a decrease in fatigue and an increase in energy levels. The findings of this study suggest that a low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective means of improving physical fitness in sedentary, middle-aged women.
