The Metabolism of Islands Simron Singh, Marina Fischer-Kowalski, Marian Chertow, 2021. This book makes the case for why we should care about islands and their sustainability. Islands are hotspots of biocultural diversity and home to 600 million people that depend on one sixth of the earth's total area, including the surrounding oceans, for their subsistence. Today they are at the frontlines of climate change and face an existential crisis. Islands are, however, potential hubs of innovation that are uniquely positioned to be leaders in sustainability and climate action. This volume argues that a full-fledged program on island industrial ecology is urgently needed, with the aim of offering policy-relevant insights and strategies to sustain small islands in an era of global environmental change. The nine contributions in this volume cover a wide range of applications of socio-metabolic research, from flow accounts to stock analysis and their relationship to services in space and time. They offer insights into how reconfiguring patterns of resource use will allow island governments to build resilience and adapt to the challenges of climate change.

Transfer at one of the world's most dangerous airports to a 90-minute flight to Pokhara, followed by a jarring eight-hour Jeep ride over a vertiginous dirt road. One side is a mountain wall; the other side is a two-hundred-foot cliff. Finally, you arrive, but it's not just any schoolroom. It has been converted into an operating room so that doctors from New York Eye. You may not even have to go to foreign lands, as opportunities may exist within your own state. Blumenfeld shows readers how to identify the right location and volunteer situation, how to go about planning trips and preparing for activities, how to reach out, how to help.
