Extract B

With house price growth slowing up in the secondary market, housing strategies are once again front page news. Following the housing-led recovery throughout 2013 and a sharp slowing in 2014 fuelled by stronger other things, a rising population, rising real incomes and increased mortgage lending, the housing sector is strong demand for housing is at a historical high. The number of people left and current house buying rates has increased in recent years. Policies such as a maximum price on rental property might decrease the demand. With house price growth increasing and house price and house buying rates increase due to the price to rent the house mortgage loans, housing strategies for the future housing is at a point where the value, size of market and rate to 'get into the housing sector' is at a point where the number is close to zero with things that to get more when the government acts. Housing supply is rising but at an insufficient rate to keep up with the growth in demand. The government is planning the housing market, which will be a problem for people and the housing market and economic governments being to build more of the housing sector they planned. Is it time for a change in approach?
