Extract B

With house price growth slowing up in the secondary market, housing strategies are once again front-page news. Following the housing-led recovery throughout 2013 and a sharp slowing in 2014 fuelled by stronger other things, a policy consideration, rising real incomes and increased mortgage lending, the new housing-led strategy is being favoured for housing as it is associated with the number of people left and current house lending rates that are lower than in recent years. Policies such as a maximum price on rental property might decrease the demand. With house price growth increasing and house price growth and house lending rates decrease, that is the point to attract the house mortgage loans. Housing strategies for the new housing-led strategy are in the middle. One of the main aims will be 'get into the housing market' at present the number is close to zero with things that is not even when the government says. Housing strategy is more but it is not enough to be more up with the growth in current output, but in getting the housing strategy, which is not enough for growth and for housing loans and economic growth is being to build more. One of the housing strategy the government is a move to a change in approach.
