

Repeat Start and Continuity 1-Tube:

Most batteries of this type should have continuity (sound and light indication on meter) from each wire to every other wire.

High Intensity Discharge Batteries*Caution:

Under no circumstances should this tester be used to test the high voltage output side of an high intensity discharge battery! Disconnect from power before testing.

1. Touch either probe to the center contact in the empty bulb socket.
2. Touch the other probe to the socket threads.
3. Listen for a rapidly decreasing sound, decaying to nothing. A constant sound or no sound indicates a defective fixture.

Note: If the fixture being tested contains a photocell, it must be disconnected before testing fixtures, or test results will be invalid. This test procedure should be maintained for each found of fixture in use to be certain of test validity.

LED Fixture — Component Testing*Capacitor

Use the leads across the capacitor and listen for the sound of the capacitor being charged. The sound should start at a high pitch and rapidly drop off to nothing as the capacitor is charged. To repeat this test you must reverse the leads and test again. If charging is indicated in both directions, the capacitor should be considered good. If the sound is continuous, the capacitor is shorted and is defective. If no sound is heard, the capacitor is open and is defective.

Igniter

Connect the leads across the red and white leads of the igniter. A very quick capacitor charge or click should be heard, and the light on the tester should flash. Any other sound across any other combination of wires should be an indication of a defective igniter.

Note: Certain types of specialized electronic starter boards cannot be tested in this manner. Some of the components on the circuit board can be individually tested however, following the already described procedures. If necessary, determine the faulty component by process of elimination. Since there are various manufacturers of VHF igniters, wires do not always have the same color coding. If the igniter being tested has a different color coding, you should test test a new igniter of the same type to determine the appropriate wires for testing.

Bulb(s)

Batteries are sensitive to heat. Check for signs of overheating. Test the battery for continuity between each terminal and every other terminal. There should be no open circuits. Verify the level of continuity by comparing the pitch of continuity indication to the pitch from testing the same winding on a known good battery.

If the fixture still does not work after all components have been tested good, further testing may be required.

Procedure

For accurate test results disconnect the photocell from the fixture for these tests.

1. Connect the test leads between the line-in and the line-out terminals and listen for continuous sound. The sound indicates a defective photocell.
2. Connect one lead to the neutral terminal with the other lead connected to the line-in. With light shining on the photocell you should hear a continuous sound (not as loud as the sound heard when connected to the line-in and line-out).
3. Using your hand, cover the eye of the photocell and listen as the sound diminishes to nothing. This verifies that the photocell is responding to light properly.

MAINTENANCE*General

Keep tester clean and dry.

Wipe clean with a damp cloth. Let dry completely before using.

Battery Condition

Plug test leads into meter. With no test clips attached, touch plugs together. The meter should produce a loud continuous tone and LED should light brightly. Also test a known good bulb and verify brightness of test. Replace battery if either test produces questionable results.

Battery Replacement (Fig. 2)

1. Remove back cover by prying with small screwdriver.
2. Remove batteries from holder.
3. Install new batteries and replace back cover. For best results, use alkaline batteries only.

BACK COVER*Fig. 2*WARRANTY
