The image contains two anatomical diagrams. On the left is a detailed illustration of the human muscular system, showing the muscles of the torso, arms, and legs in a reddish-pink color. On the right is a diagram of the human skeletal system, showing the bones in a light tan color. Below the skeletal diagram is a small table with two columns, likely listing bones and their corresponding numbers or names, though the text is too small to read.

A diagram of the human circulatory system. It shows a central heart with four chambers (right and left atria and ventricles). Red lines represent oxygenated blood flow, and blue lines represent deoxygenated blood flow. The system branches out to various parts of the body, including the head, arms, torso, and legs. Labels in various languages are present around the diagram, but they are not legible in this low-resolution image.

This anatomical diagram illustrates the internal structure of the human eye. The main cross-section shows the cornea, iris, lens, vitreous body, retina, and optic nerve. Two smaller diagrams at the bottom show the eye in different states: one with the lens and ciliary muscles contracted (near vision) and another with the lens and ciliary muscles relaxed (far vision). The diagram is labeled with various parts of the eye, including the cornea, iris, pupil, lens, vitreous body, retina, and optic nerve.

The anatomy of the digestive system

The digestive system is responsible for breaking down food into nutrients that can be absorbed by the body. It consists of the mouth, pharynx, esophagus, stomach, small intestine, large intestine, and rectum. The liver and pancreas also play important roles in digestion.

An anatomical diagram of the human respiratory system. It shows the trachea (windpipe) leading from the larynx down to the bronchi, which branch into the two lungs. The lungs are shown in a cross-section, revealing the internal branching structure of the bronchi and the alveoli. The diagram is color-coded, with the trachea and bronchi in shades of pink and red, and the lungs in a lighter pink color.

This diagram illustrates the anatomy of the human ear. The external ear (pinna) is shown on the right, leading into the ear canal. The middle ear is depicted in the center, containing the ossicles (malleus, incus, stapes). The internal ear is shown on the left, including the cochlea (responsible for hearing) and the vestibular system (responsible for balance). Labels indicate various parts of the ear, such as the eardrum (tympanic membrane) and the oval window.
