The Paleoanthropology and Archaeology of

Big-Game Hunting John D. Speth, 2010-09-08 Since its inception paleoanthropology has been closely wedded to the idea that big game hunting by our hominin ancestors arose first and foremost as a means for acquiring energy and vital nutrients This assumption has rarely been questioned and seems intuitively obvious meat is a nutrient rich food with the ideal array of amino acids and big animals provide meat in large convenient packages Through new research the author of this volume provides a strong argument that the primary goals of big game hunting were actually social and political increasing hunter s prestige and standing and that the nutritional component was just an added bonus Through a comprehensive interdisciplinary research approach the author examines the historical and current perceptions of protein as an important nutrient source the biological impact of a high protein diet and the evidence of this in the archaeological record and provides a compelling reexamination of this long held conclusion This volume will be of interest to researchers in Archaeology
