Write Like a Sumerian!

Cuneiform is noted as the oldest form of writing, systems were developed in Mesopotamia as a method of communication. Cuneiform included a combination of pictographs, symbols representing entire words and phonograms (symbols representing a syllable or sound). Early Sumerian writing began as a pictographic system with simple pictures and symbols, which represented a whole object or idea. Sumerians developed pictures of objects and animals (including the well-known symbols, sheep, fish, and birds) to represent words such as eating and drinking were represented with abstract symbols. This was a revolutionary development because it allowed a more sophisticated writing system to be developed. The evolution of the pictorial system of writing provided a means to convey more abstract ideas. Symbols representing sounds, instead of whole ideas, became possible. This system of writing could be used to represent the word "water" by a symbol that represented the word "water" (a drop of water) because the two words sounded alike. This is the same concept as the alphabet used today. The Cuneiform system of writing developed over a period of 100 years and eventually died. Although symbols, by 3000 B.C., the Sumerians had developed a complete system of writing.
