A Strange and Formidable Weapon Marion Girard, 2008-06-01 The advent of poison gas in World War I shocked Britons at all levels of society yet by the end of the conflict their nation was a leader in chemical warfare Although never used on the home front poison gas affected almost every segment of British society physically mentally or emotionally proving to be an armament of total war Through cartoons military records novels treaties and other sources Marion Girard examines the varied ways different sectors of British society viewed chemical warfare from the industrialists who promoted their toxic weapons while maintaining private control of production to the politicians who used gas while balancing the need for victory with the risk of developing a reputation for barbarity Although most Britons considered gas a vile weapon and a symptom of the enemy's inhumanity many eventually condoned its use The public debates about the future of gas extended to the interwar years and evidence reveals that the taboo against poison gas was far from inevitable A Strange and Formidable Weapon uncovers the complicated history of this weapon of total war and illustrates the widening involvement of society in warfare

Psychologism and Psychoaesthetics John Fizer, 1981-01-01 Unlike studies which confine psychologism to the second half of the nineteenth century and to an explicit claim of psychology as a Grundwissenschaft during that period this work attempts to trace psychologism's emergence in Greek antiquity in hedonistic tendencies of the Renaissance and in British Empiricism Thus psychologism figures as a generic concept embracing a variety of both positivistic and idealistic arguments concerning the localization of normative sciences particularly aesthetics and literary theory in psychological space This study also considers the implicit psychologism of even those psychoaesthetic theories which claimed to be against the exclusive status of psychology In their actual treatment of aesthetic and literary facts such theories inadvertently did indeed resort to psychologistic arguments The position from which I have chosen to look at psychologically committed aesthetics and literary theory is essentially phenomenological The author seeks to present psychologism as a central tendency of psychoaesthetics as well as to assert critically psychologism's basic assumptions
