

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies, free trade is a system wherein all the goods of governments have free trade across international frontiers for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade system is in place, there have been various non-tariff trade barriers, which impede the free trade. Examples of these barriers include the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) among others.

However, there are some barriers to free trade, which are not covered by the free trade system. These barriers are known as trade barriers. The barriers to free trade are of two types: tariff and non-tariff. Tariff barriers are those barriers which are levied on the import and export of goods. Non-tariff barriers are those barriers which are not levied on the import and export of goods. These barriers are of two types: quantitative and qualitative. Quantitative barriers are those barriers which restrict the quantity of goods that can be imported or exported. Qualitative barriers are those barriers which restrict the quality of goods that can be imported or exported.
