Students in chemistry and mathematics in secondary schools are encouraged to study in English. This is not the case in the majority of other countries. In the United States, for example, students in chemistry and mathematics are encouraged to study in English, but in other countries, such as Germany, students are encouraged to study in their native language. This is because the majority of students in these countries are not native speakers of English, and it is more difficult for them to learn in English. In the United States, however, the majority of students are native speakers of English, and it is easier for them to learn in English. This is why students in chemistry and mathematics in the United States are encouraged to study in English.
