Vitamin C Alan B. Clemetson,2018-01-10 The factors affecting blood vitamin C levels are described in detail in this series Many factors such as aging smoking infection trauma surgery hemolysis hormone administration heavy metals pregnancy alcohol ionizing radiation and several medicines have been found to cause a disturbance of ascorbic acid metabolism and to reduce blood vitamin C levels Indeed abnormalities of ascorbic acid metabolism due to factors such as smoking occur much more frequently than does dietary vitamin C deficiency today It is now known that low blood vitamin C levels are associated with histaminemia high blood histamine levels and also that ascorbate responsive histaminemia is common in apparently healthy people High blood histamine levels are believed to cause small hemorrhages within the inner walls of the blood vessels and these may lead to the deposition of cholesterol as an aberrant form of wound healing Ascorbic acid not only reduces blood histamine levels but also aids the conversion of cholesterol to bile acids in the liver The clinical pathological and chemical changes observed in ascorbic acid deficiency are discussed in detail Several diseases and disorders associated with low blood vitamin C levels are also described Possible toxic effects resulting from the oxidation of ascorbic acid are noted and reasons for the use of D catechin or other chelating fiber to prevent or minimize the release of ascorbate free radical are detailed An excellent reference for physicians nutritionists and other scientists

Theoretical Nursing Afaf Ibrahim Meleis, 2011 An additional assumption was that the processes for theory development were new to nursing and hence nurses in graduate programs learned strategies for advancing knowledge from other disciplines This assumption was debunked with the knowledge that nurses were always engaged in knowledge development driven by their experiences in clinical practice Because of these assumptions most of the early writing about theory development was about outlining strategies that should be used rather than strategies that have already been used in the discipline to develop theories Theorists themselves did not uncover or adequately discuss ways by which they developed their theories therefore the tendency was to describe processes that were based on theories developed in other disciplines mainly the physical and social sciences And an implicit assumption was made that there should be a single strategy for theory development some claiming to begin the process from practice and others believing it should be driven by research Provided by publisher
