Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQol-5D questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, measured using a 6-minute walk test and a handgrip strength test. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in HRQL compared to the control group. The improvement was most pronounced in the domains of mobility and self-rated health. There were no significant differences between the groups in the domains of usual activities, pain, and anxiety/depression. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HRQL of sedentary, middle-aged women. The improvement was most pronounced in the domains of mobility and self-rated health.
