

Building the JavaScript Library

The first step in building the JavaScript library is to create a new file named `library.js` in the `src` directory. This file will contain the code for the library, which will be used by the application.

Next, we need to define the `Library` class. This class will be the base class for all the other classes in the library.

The `Library` class will have a constructor function that takes a single argument, `name`, which is the name of the library.

The constructor function will create a new object with a `name` property and a `methods` property. The `name` property will be set to the value of the `name` argument, and the `methods` property will be an empty array.

The `Library` class will also have a `prototype` property. This property will be an object that contains the methods that are shared by all instances of the `Library` class.

The `prototype` property will be set to an object that has a `name` property and a `methods` property. The `name` property will be set to the value of the `name` argument, and the `methods` property will be an empty array.

The `prototype` property will also have a `constructor` property. This property will be set to the `Library` class.

The `prototype` property will also have a `methods` property. This property will be an array that contains the methods that are shared by all instances of the `Library` class.

The `prototype` property will also have a `name` property. This property will be set to the value of the `name` argument.

The `prototype` property will also have a `methods` property. This property will be an array that contains the methods that are shared by all instances of the `Library` class.

The `prototype` property will also have a `name` property. This property will be set to the value of the `name` argument.

The `prototype` property will also have a `name` property. This property will be set to the value of the `name` argument.

The `prototype` property will also have a `methods` property. This property will be an array that contains the methods that are shared by all instances of the `Library` class.

The `prototype` property will also have a `name` property. This property will be set to the value of the `name` argument.
