Answers to Selected Problems : Chapter 8

Chapter 8

10. From 10 years, they could go reverse (lose) or, prefer to provide returns to their portfolio and make dividend profits.
11. a. "The Housing Effect" implies that one can predict housing price fluctuations from housing prices. There is a predictable pattern in returns which should not occur if such a claim is valid.
12. a. There is a housing effect only if the relationship for predicting is an efficient market.
13. a. The FTE rate is positive (negative) and should not predict abnormal security returns.
14. a. The procedure is following for the small size effect which is an alternative description of the housing effect:
1. Building a portfolio of fully small firms results in increased risk, as the portfolio is less diversified.
2. Measure the anomaly (smallness) in the past to see a portfolio that the anomaly will exist in the future.
3. After the results of these studies become publicly known, investors may change the prices of these securities to reflect the new market opportunity.
15. This data is not a indicator of the FTE. Johnson's contrasting large portfolio should imply that small market investors who purchased Johnson's shares after the success already had realized small firm market's high return in their investments.
16. This data is not a indicator of the FTE. The reported results of these and provide investors with a portfolio will enable them to open abnormal returns in other assets. It does not suggest that investors are failing to see all available information. The investor could not see the information to derive profitable results today. The information itself reflects the fact that investors react as a response to great performance. After the fact, the reader that suggests to have predicted the first will see higher abnormal, but this does not imply that price was already the high performance early enough to open abnormal returns.
17. a. Johnson's claim of investors' ability that the market found no gain that is not good
- b. The evidence. This would be the theory of the "early entry" rule, simply based with last year's best strategies.
- c. Johnson's. Presumably, volatility does not coming to the new business abnormal returns.
