I	Introduction – What is an information report? Tuning in In groups of 3 – 4, give students a selection of books or printed texts. Ask students to sort the items into categories. Allow students to decide how many categories to create and choose their own criteria/heading for deciding which items belong in which category. Make sure that students understand that all the items grouped together in a category must all have at least one feature that is the same. (e.g. students may decide to sort items into three categories: texts about animals, texts about people, and texts about the environment, or students may decide on two categories: texts we are interested in reading, texts we are not interested in reading, etc.) Have groups share their sorted texts and explain their reasoning. Show your students your own sorted texts. Ask students how they think you have categorised the texts. What do they notice is the same about all of the texts in a category? Together with students, identify that the texts are sorted into "imaginative" texts and "information and facts" texts. Explain that the proper word for imaginative texts is "fiction" and the proper word for texts which are factual is "non-fiction." Ask students to now re-group their own selection of texts into fiction and non-fiction categories. Collect each group's set of fiction texts, leaving them with the non-fiction texts. Ask students to place a post-it note on each text. Just from the title, ask students to predict and write on a post-it card sort of information they might find in each text. Ask, was this easy or hard to do from just the title? Why might that be? Explain that all information reports contain factual information on a specific topic (usually stated in the title) and are written to communicate these facts to an audience.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A variety of fiction and non-fiction books or printed texts for students to sort in groups. Aim for at least six books to sort for each group. (Each group can have the same items, if desired) Example piles of texts sorted into fiction and non-fiction categories.
