

Notes: Mechanisms

What is the biological significance of these mechanisms?

Why?

Epithelial cells are the first barrier between the environment and the body. They are the first line of defense against pathogens. They are also the first line of defense against toxins. They are the first line of defense against cancer. They are the first line of defense against infection. They are the first line of defense against injury. They are the first line of defense against damage. They are the first line of defense against death.

1. What is the biological significance of the extracellular matrix (ECM) in the context of Figure 1?

The ECM is a complex network of proteins and carbohydrates that provides structural support and signaling for cells.

2. The ECM is a complex network of proteins and carbohydrates that provides structural support and signaling for cells. What are the main components of the ECM?

The main components of the ECM are collagen, elastin, and proteoglycans. Collagen is a fibrous protein that provides structural support. Elastin is a protein that provides elasticity. Proteoglycans are complex molecules that provide signaling and structural support.
