

MASTER THESIS

In this master's thesis, focus is laid on common international building and construction standard contracts in Germany, the UK and the ones by the international association FIDIC. It points out the major differences with a focus on unit rate contracts (price per unit contracts). The analysis of the unit rate contracts will be primarily done by answering the questions: What are the chief differences between those model contracts and how can I describe such a unit in foreign countries?

This thesis is structured into nine chapters. The first chapter presents a general introduction about the topic. Chapter two provides useful information about the field of evaluation, the economic importance of the building and construction industry and historical facts about international construction. Chapter three explains three important international standard forms of contract in the building and construction industry and describes them in detail. Chapter four deals with one of the main issues of this thesis, it is about the performance of unit rate contracts within the three types of the standard forms of contract. A civil works contract of an industrial project in Romania will be analysed in chapter five. Finally, a conclusion of this thesis will be given in chapter six.

The sources used for writing this thesis were found in the library of the Technical University of Graz (TU Graz, Austria), in the library of the California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo (CalPoly San Luis Obispo, CA) or in the library of the FH Joanneum Graz (University of Applied Sciences Graz, Austria). To guarantee a high level of quality, the chosen literature is written by accredited authors, and national governmental papers or reports from official European associations.
