Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40 to 50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to either a training group or a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, while the control group remained sedentary. Physical fitness was measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training group had significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and body composition compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively improve physical fitness in sedentary, middle-aged men.
