The Mind in Therapy Katherine D. Arbuthnott, Dennis W. Arbuthnott, Valerie A. Thompson, 2014-02-04 Human mental capacities and processes are the raw materials with which psychotherapists work Thus what cognitive scientists have discovered in recent decades is potentially tremendous value for psychotherapeutic practice But the new knowledge is not readily accessible to therapists who find both language and methodology off putting The Mind in Therapy bridges the gap It offers a comprehensive overview of the relevant range of cognitive activities ranging from complex mental operations such as problem solving decision making reasoning and metacognition to basic functions such as attention memory and emotion The authors integrate key new findings about the interaction between cognition and emotion inhibition and counterfactual thinking processes that loom large in practice Each chapter reviews an area of cognitive research clearly explains the findings and highlights their implications and applications in diverse models of therapy cognitive behavioral psychodynamic humanistic and family Each includes case vignettes that illustrate the ways in which the concepts are important and useful in practice All therapists rely on the human mind to effect the change they seek The clearer understanding of human cognitive capacities idiosyncrasies and limitations their own as well as clients that they will gain from this book will enhance the effectiveness of both beginning and experienced practitioners whatever their orientation
